Materials about Prisons in the Polish Territories in the Fund of the Main Prison Administration of the Russian Empire

The Main prison administration was established on 27 February 1879 as a part of the Ministry of Internal Affairs, and from December 1895 it became a part of the Ministry of Justice and was liquidated in 1917. It carried out the central administration of the prison system of the Russian Empire, managing the prison and convict transports, places of imprisonment, exile, and penal servitude of the civil department. The Main prison administration consisted of the office and fifteen departments that oversaw various aspects of the life of the prison sector, as well as the prison council. The management staff consisted of only thirty employees, so it was necessary to attract supernumerary employees. A large role was played by prison inspectors, who submitted their reports directly to the head of the Administration and were sent by him to audit subordinate institutions.<sup>1</sup>

The departments, whose duties overlapped in many instances, were as follows: The 1st department dealt with the personnel of the Main prison administration and of the institutions subordinate to it; the issuance of pensions and benefits to the officials of the prison department; and conducted audits in subordinate institutions of the Main prison administration. The 2nd department dealt with construction issues and carried out technical supervision and supervision of prison construction. The 3rd department dealt with the administration of penal servitude and exile, the organization of the administration, the regime, the placement of convicts and members of their families, and the organization of the work of exile convicts and prisoners. After 1904 it was in charge of the affairs of political prisoners before they were sent to penal servitude or into exile and monitored the correspondence of prisoners, while after 1914 it dealt with the issuance of allowances to prison officials and collected lists of the distribution of prisoners for hard labour in the provinces. The 4th department was in charge of keeping and accommodating prisoners in jails of general arrangement, correctional prison cells, and arrest houses (until 1904), and conducted correspondence with governors about the preparation of clothes for prisoners, the procurement and supply of food to prison facilities, the sanitary conditions in prisons, preventive measures to avoid epidemics in prisons, and collected information on infectious diseases, prisoner escapes, fires in prison institutions, and accidents involving prisoners. The 5th department was in charge of financial affairs. The 6th department dealt with the transfer of prisoners. The 7th department, formed in 1902, was responsible for organizing the work of exile convicts and prisoners, and was in correspondence with governors about the organization of factories, workshops, and mines where the prisoners worked. The 8th department dealt with the elaboration of circular regulations and instructions, and the compilation of statements and statistical lists of convicts. The 9th department was in charge of corrective-educational institutions for minors and patronage cases over those released from prison. From 1 March 1915 to 1917, the 10th department dealt with the organization of supervision in places of detention, and conducted correspondence with governors about increasing the salaries of wardens, prisoner escapes, and their petitions for transferring them to other prisons. The 11th department was responsible, from 1 March 1915 to 1917, for the allocation of pensions and benefits to the officials of the prison department and their families. The 12th department was in charge of staffing and rewarding employees of the Main prison administration, and from 1916 the functions of the 1st department were transferred to it. The 13th department was responsible for supplying the officials of the prison department with uniforms and equipment. The 14th department dealt with the supervision of the sanitary conditions of prisoners. The 15th department was in charge of hiring premises for the prison department.

The Fund of the Main Prison Administration, now stored in the State Archives of the Russian Federation (Fund 122), includes a considerable amount of materials on prisons located on Polish territory which was – in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries – part of the Russian Empire. In the 60 years of the nineteenth century these lands in most cases were called ‘the provinces of the Kingdom of Poland’ and ‘provinces by the Vistula’ (‘Privislinskie gubernii’) instead of the previously used name ‘The Kingdom of Poland’. Since 1887, the most popular word combinations were ‘provinces of the region by the Vistula’, ‘Privislinskie provinces’ and ‘Privislinskij Kraj’, and in 1897 Nicholas II restricted the use of the names ‘Kingdom of Poland’ and ‘provinces of the Kingdom of Poland’ to cases of extreme necessity, although from The code of laws these names have not been removed. During the existence of the Main Prison Administration, the Warsaw, Kalisz, Kielce, Lublin, Łomża, Piotrków, Płock, Radom, Siedlce and Suwałki provinces belonged to the Privislinskie gubernii.

All these documents – circulars, materials on the construction and reconstruction of prisons, the condition of prison buildings, the regime of detention of prisoners, and correspondence with the heads of places of detention on these and other issues – are dispersed in separate folders (Delo) stored in different parts of the Fund, because the Fund is not thematically systematized, and its structure practically repeats the structure of the Main Prison Administration, which was divided, as already mentioned above, into departments whose competences often overlapped and duplicated each other. Since the total number of folders of the Fund exceeds 10,000, and its inventories are not accompanied by geographic or subject indexes, it is extremely difficult for researchers to find the necessary folders. It should be noted that the folders concerning the prisons of the Kingdom of Poland are practically not introduced into scientific circulation; moreover, in most cases (the Fund is not microfilmed) I was the first to sign in the application sheets of the folders.

While preparing this article, all inventories (Opis) of the Fund were reviewed, and folders were revealed highlighting various problems in the history of prisons, their management, and the maintenance of prisoners in the territory of the Kingdom of Poland during the existence of the Main Prison Administration. A list of these folders is given in the annex to the article.

Of course, it was impossible to review all these folders within the framework of preparation of this article, and this was not my intention. My main task was the identification of these folders. The subjects of folders are, as a rule, adequately reflected in their titles, because these folders were created mainly with respect to private issues and plots. However, despite the diversity of their subjects, they can be divided into large thematic groups. Viewing the folders from different groups, reflecting various aspects of the history of prisons in the Kingdom of Poland, makes it possible to identify the main problems in their activities and their management.

First of all, it should be noted that the management of prisons in the territory of the Kingdom of Poland, like all general management of anything in the Russian Empire, was rigidly centralized. This led to petty regulation of all aspects of life by the central bodies, as well as the creation of a variety of forms of reporting. However, for the researcher this becomes a positive development, because in the Fund of the Main Prison Administration we can find documents that describe events and problems of a local nature (such as escapes of prisoners from arrest houses or requests for higher salaries for particular prison guards). These materials allow, on one hand, to see prison life in its entirety, and on the other hand to understand the mechanism of administering the prison system in the provinces of the Kingdom of Poland.

Perhaps the biggest headache of the jailers at the turn of the 1880s was the introduction of the judicial statutes of 1874 in the Kingdom of Poland, which entered into force on 1 July 1876. This led to a significant increase in the number of prisoners and required the reorganization of places of detention. In each provincial and district town, in addition to a prison for those sentenced to prison special premises were required for prisoners under investigation and for persons sentenced by a magistrate to short-term arrest.

The governors of all Polish provinces reported to the leadership about the overflow of prisons and the problems arising in connection with this. The scope of this phenomenon can be judged from the report of the Siedlce governor, who wrote to the Main Prison Administration on 24 March 1880 that in the Siedlce prison, designed for 110 prisoners, 333 people were kept in custody (including 141 persons under investigation, who should sit alone, and 135 sentenced to imprisonment in a workhouse and prison).<sup>2</sup> But the Warsaw prisons were especially crowded. “These prisons have become the central places of imprisonment not only of prisoners from most of the counties of the Warsaw province, but also of prisoners of some category from other provinces of the Privilinskij region”. Reporting this to the Main Prison Administration on 3 June 1879, the Warsaw Governor added that these prisons “now house convicts transferred from other prisons of the Privilinskij region to listen to the decision of the Chamber of Appeals for appeals against the verdicts of the District Courts; the detainees previously kept in the detentions, who are now being transferred to Warsaw prisons, due to the trial of their cases by judicial orders located in Warsaw, where some of the convicts sentenced to correctional prison cells are also serving”.<sup>3</sup>

In July 1881, while inspecting the prisons of the Radom and Kielce provinces the inspector of the Main Prisons Department, Dobrosлавин, devoted his extensive report to overcrowding of the prisons examined by him and the possibility of adapting a building of the Holy Cross Monastery to the prison needs. From the report we can see that in the Radom province, with a population of more than 500,000 people, there were only two prisons – in Sandomierz and Radom, and according to the standards used in Russian provinces, where there are 10 county-level prison castles in a province with a 1.5 million population, there should have been three of them. However, “before the introduction of judicial reform, these two prisons could satisfy the needs of the province, but after 1877, with the introduction of district courts, the prisons began to overflow, and every year the prison population grows larger and larger. The consequences of the extreme overcrowding do not slow down and manifest themselves, for example, by terrible epidemics of typhus, as was the case last year in the Sandomierz prison ... Finally, this terrible overcrowding in the prisons halted all the prisoners’ productivity”, since all production facilities had to be given for the maintenance of prisoners.<sup>4</sup>

However, the higher authorities did not hurry to solve the local problems, and the appeal of the Siedlce governor to the chief of the Main Prison Administration on 31 March 1880 looks like a cry of the soul:

Since 1876, I have constantly reported to the top authorities about the extremely unsatisfactory state of the prisons in the Siedlce province, and I petition to eliminate at least those major shortcomings that are felt in the establishment of local places of detention, which make them absolutely inconsistent with their purpose. Until now, none of my submissions have been satisfied. Meanwhile, the situation of the prisons in the province is growing worse and worse; as has been evidenced by the very frequent recent escapes of prisoners, as well as the ever increasing typhus in Siedlce prison, and therefore, prompted by the desperate situation of the local administration, which has absolutely no means of maintaining proper order in places of detention, I consider it my duty to inform Your Excellency of all my ideas on the prison sphere, outlining the reasons for the permanent petitions, as well as deliver some additional considerations on this subject.<sup>5</sup>

Escapes from prisons were, indeed, a major problem, and a large number of cases were reported to higher authorities by all governors. However, it should be noted that they included cases from district arrest facilities and untried arrests, where those convicted of and/or suspected of committing petty thefts were kept. The reasons for escape were the negligence and carelessness of the watchmen, “their failure to take precautionary measures during the release of the convict to a latrine”, the conspiracy of guards with the prisoners, the break of the stone wall of an adjoining room that was not locked, the breaking of a cell door etc. <sup>6</sup>

To bring the quantity and quality of the prison facilities into accord with the new Judicial Statutes, local authorities had to build new buildings in a hurry, or to find existing ones suitable for conversion to prison needs. The latter were either bought by the treasury or rented for a more or less lengthy period. Since the local administration had no money for these purposes, the governors appealed to the Main Prison Administration with a request to provide them with a loan for these purposes at the expense of the next year’s budget, or to allow the use of funds allocated under other articles.<sup>7</sup> As a rule, each such appeal gave rise to a lengthy correspondence, in which the Technical and Construction Committee, which provided expertise concerning the submitted estimates and drawings, often took part. In addition, in such cases there were often appeals and even telegrams (with a paid answer) by contractors who had completed work on the construction or reconstruction of buildings, but who had not received their money. The response of the chief of the Main Prison Administration, M.N. Galkin-Vrasskij, to one of the contractors, dated 27 April 1880, strikingly demonstrates the high level at which such questions were resolved: “I ask to announce to the contractor Lipskij that the case of the release of money for the correction of the Suwałki prison was submitted to the State Council”.<sup>8</sup> In passing, we note that even cases of simple repairs of buildings or technical devices in prison premises, starting with requests for a loan or permission to use funds allocated for other purposes, also caused extensive correspondence and were resolved at the highest level.<sup>9</sup>

A vivid example of how long the correspondence about the construction of a new prison building could last could be the case of choosing a place and acquiring land for the construction of a central penitentiary for those sentenced to imprisonment in the Warsaw Judicial District, which began on 11 November 1880 and ended 18 May 1894, though the construction of the building itself hadn't yet begun.<sup>10</sup> Initially, there was a correspondence about the choice of a location; then, when the location – behind the Mokotovskaja outpost – was chosen and the owner of the land, engineer Vitkovskij, on 12 September 1881 signed a declaration of readiness to sell it to the treasury, the matter for some reason stalled. Only after an actual ultimatum by the owner of the land – that if the treasury did not buy it from him within a month and a half he would renounce his promise and sell the land to someone else – was the land redeemed on 26 May 1882. In December of the same year the Warsaw Vice-Governor informed the Main Prison Administration that the land was not being used and offered to lease it. Then extensive correspondence began in connection with the proposal of the titular counsellor Glinka-Mavrin to build on this land, at his own expense, one prison for 1,000 people or two prisons for 500 people, each in exchange for the transfer to him of several buildings in the centre of Warsaw. Calculations showed that despite the formally equal estimated cost of buildings, their location in the centre of Warsaw and the additional costs of their release made the offer unprofitable for the treasury. In his report for 1886 the Warsaw Governor reported on the overcrowding of the prisons and the need to commence construction of a building on the plot of land bought in 1881. In the spring of 1892 it was discovered that the former owner of the land, Vitkovskij, had sowed this plot without permission, and a loss was collected from him in court. And finally, on 30 April 1892, the Main Prison Administration informed the Warsaw Governor that it had no objections to the return of this piece of land to rent.

As was already noted, in the Fund there are a lot of folders on private financial matters, generated by the fact that the local administration had no right to incur any expenses in excess of the established budget, or to make changes to it. A striking example of such a case could be a matter of increasing salaries, or the payment of pensions and benefits to the families of prison staff.<sup>11</sup>

However, in the Fund there are also folders containing consolidated information on the provinces and even throughout the entire Kingdom of Poland.

Examples would include: the 'Statements on the number of expenses for the maintenance of places of detention for 1873–5. with an indication of the grounds and numerical data serving as a guide in calculating these expenses'; 'Extract from the general estimate for 1860 of the expenses of the Kingdom of Poland in the Department of Internal Affairs, of the salaries received by employees in prisons and detention arrests in the Kingdom'; 'Extract from additional estimates of expenses of the Office of Internal Affairs for 1868 on the maintenance of employees in prisons and detentions arrests'<sup>12</sup>, as well as others.

Finally, there are folders containing materials which give an idea not only about the state of affairs in the prison department, but also about the attitude of the society towards the jailers. A vivid example of such materials can be found in two folders containing a correspondence about the hiring of an executioner for the Warsaw prison. The Warsaw Governor appealed for the first time on 24 April 1879 to the Executive Police Department of the Ministry of Internal Affairs with a request for a loan of 300 roubles a year for salary for a civilian executioner. He explained his request by the fact that after the death of the executioner in 1876 the amount of his salary ceased to be included in the cost estimates for the prison. Correspondence broke off on the question of the Main Prison Administration, on which occasion an executioner was planned to be hired.<sup>13</sup> The Warsaw governor returned to this question in his address to the head of the Main Prison Administration on 2 February 1883, substantiating his request by the fact that at the present time, at the suggestion of the Minister of Internal Affairs he repeatedly had to expel to St. Petersburg and other cities executors of death sentences. Not having a person in prison who would have been obliged to go to the place where the sentence was carried out at the first request, he had to turn to the Warsaw Police and, through agents of the detective department, search for a person in the city who would agree to carry out the sentence. The search for such persons is extremely difficult, because no one wishes to fulfil the duties of executioner. Next, the persons found by the police among the so-called 'hycel', engaged in catching dogs in the city and destroying them, do not correspond to the duties assigned to them. But even those ... for the future time hardly will agree to be executors of death sentences.<sup>14</sup>

The Main Prison Administration responded with a proposal to look for those who wish to fulfil the duties of executioner among convicted criminals, referring to the circulars that permitted this from 1834 and 1836, and at the request of the vice-governor, who did not have the texts of these circulars, sent documents (however, in the folder there is only a cover letter to them).<sup>15</sup> After this the correspondence was cut short.

Summing up our review, we can state that among the documents and materials kept in the Fund of the Main Prison Administration (GARF, Fund 122) there are a significant number of folders containing information which can be useful and interesting for researchers looking into the history of prisons in Poland. The main problem with working with this Fund is the difficulty in finding folders on a specific research topic. We hope that the list of folders attached to this article will help in these searches and will create a good incentive to introduce the Fund's materials into scientific circulation.
